The DAIRY

DAIRY NOTES.

Don't try to dairy with beef cows. Any good milk cows of any breed are good property.

A good milk cow sells for more than a corn-fat steer.

If there is no silage you should at least provide a supply of roots.

Two or three good Jersey cows are worth a great deal on any farm.

It is well to let a cow have all the hay she will consume without waste.

The heifer can begin to bring you money when two years old. Let her freshen at that age.

Good alfalfa hay for milk cows is worth very nearly as much, pound for pound, as wheat bran.

The good dairy cow gives better returns for the food consumed than any other animal that we have on the farm.

Remember the dairy cow must be held up to her highest flow of milk. It is hard to get her back if she once falls off.

Some dairymen seem to enjoy an unaccountable prejudice against the detective work which can be done by cow-testing associations.

Too many men are fooling with dairying. Let's get down to business, stop finding fault that our returns are not better and do something really worth while.

The economy of a ration depends upon the cost of producing a pound of butter or a gallon of milk and not upon the actual cost of the foods actually being utilized.

CRATE FOR CALF OR SHEEP

Gunny Sack Filled With Hay Furnishes Abundant Food and Shelter in Extreme Weather.

There are two very good reasons for tacking a gunny sack on the end of a crate in which a sheep or calf is to be shipped. In the first place, an abundant supply of real nice hay will be relished before the end of the tedious journey and then, in extreme cold weather, the sack and hay will help to protect the animal when exposed to the elements at transfer points. The added equipment is inexpensive and does not add appreciably to the weight of the crate. The plan of securing the sack to the crate is clearly indicated in the drawing.

BUILDING FOR MILK STORAGE

Should Be Free From All Objectionable Odors and Constructed to Keep Cool and Clean.

(By E. H. WEBSTER, DIRECTOR OF KANSAS EXPERIMENT STATION.)

If the milk is placed in a cellar or cave where there are decaying vegetables or fruit, it will quickly absorb the odors from them. Such places are entirely unfit for the storage of milk. The dairyman should have a building, set apart from the barns and other places from which objectionable odors might come, for the exclusive use of the dairy. This building need not be very large, but must be constructed so that it can easily be kept clean and cool. A cement floor should be laid, as it is the easiest to clean, is cool and does not rot from moisture. If the walls are built of stone, brick or concrete, so much the better, for such walls keep out the heat.

The roof construction should be such that it will effectually turn the heat of the sun. If the roof is not of concrete, it should be built double, so that an air current will pass between the upper and lower parts. Walls and ceilings should be covered with cement plaster, whether wood or stone is used in their construction. This finish, if properly put on, is easy to clean and does not readily become affected with mold or decay.

Provision must be made for an abundance of water, and the pumping arrangement must be such that the fresh water from the well or spring will flow through the dairy house. It should run into a tank built deep enough to allow the complete submerging of the milk and cream cans. The tank should have sufficient width and length to hold all that it may be necessary to use. A tank built of concrete and finished with a cement surface is the most economical in the long run, and is much more satisfactory. Provision must be made for draining it out for the purpose of cleaning. Wooden tanks are usually a source of trouble from leaks and decay. Iron tanks do not last long because they become rusty.

Feeding Cows.

It is poor policy to sell your clover hay and compel your cows to eat corn stover alone. A good cow can sell your hay crop for better money than the hay buyer can pay and will do all the hard work besides.

TOO LATE.

Papa—I hear you were a bad girl to-day and had to be whipped.
Small Daughter—Mama is awful strict. If I'd known she used to be a school teacher I'd told you not to marry her.
